The geometric elements in this print have been generated and arranged according to a rational systemised approach. Jeffrey Steele was a founding member of the Systems Group in 1969, a collective of artists in Britain committed to controlled and logical experimentation. In a statement accompanying this print, Steele described the relationship between the elements as being governed by 'syntactic transformations'. This echoes the Systems Group's interest in the dynamic possibilities of a rational visual syntax.

This print was created for the Rational Concepts portfolio, which included seven screen prints produced in an edition of 100, by artists associated with constructive art in England. The other artists represented in the portfolio are Norman Dilworth, Malcolm Hughes, Anthony Hill, Peter Lowe, Kenneth Martin and Gillian Wise.
